

MY CITY

I was born in Mogadishu. It is the capital of Somalia, but during the war I went to Sana'a the capital of Yemen, a city in a valley. They like old buildings there. The population of Yemen is about 18,000,000 people. Sana'a is surrounded by small towns. The most expensive area to live is in the centre and the cheapest area is to the south. Most of the people are farmers. There are many schools, colleges and universities. I went to all levels of school. There are two big shops in that area. There are a lot of places for sports.

I'm here now in London. I've been in England for three months only; I live in North London, in Finsbury Park. It is a lovely area; there are lots of markets, shops and schools.

My house is between a primary school and a big garden. When I feel bored I go to the garden to relax, to think, to walk and some times you can see children playing there. It is really a nice picture. My sister and I often go to walk around the area.

Our neighbours are so nice, we talk to each other.

We have Indian, Chinese and Turkish neighbours.

Last holiday we went to Northampton. It's a quiet town, full of nice people.
